

Goodwill keeps flowing for community garden

THIS week I have been touched by an anonymous gentleman who made a cash donation to the community garden.

This gentleman literally walked off the street and made this donation.

There were no contact details left, so I would like to thank this kind gentleman personally for his donation.

The community garden is literally developing in front of our eyes and while progress has been frustrating at times it is important to acknowledge those community members and local businesses that have contributed to create the garden and help it reach its current form.

This has been and will remain a community project and those involved can proudly pat themselves on the back for what has been achieved to date.

There are about 30 individual plots that have been planted out with more on the way. Any further donations and offers of assistance will be gratefully accepted.

The whole community is encouraged to drop in and have a look anytime.

Pete Malavisi, president, Busselton Community Garden.
